Hat Wearing Dinosaurs Walk Among Us!!!

Assiniboia, Manitoba November 21, 1932 by A. Nonymous

Once again our intrepid reporter has gotten a humdinger of a scoop for us! Intelligent dinosaurs walk among us unseen by all! All that is except Sir Clarence Cartwright, local veteran of the Great War, antiquarian and most recently explorer. Sir Clarence recently returned from the South Pacific where he claims he found proof positive of an Antediluvian civilization made up of intelligent dinosaurs! "Well I didn't say they were dinosaurs exactly. I did say they were reptiles of a sort but I never mentioned dinosaurs." This is what Sir Clarence shared with me last week soon after he had returned to Assiniboia from the South Pacific. He had brought proof positive and was all set to do a presentation at the Manitoba Club for the Manitoba Historical and Scientific Society when the most horrible event you can imagine took place! Sir Clarence that brave man who faced down the worst the Hun could throw at our brave boys during the Great War was foully murdered and half devoured! At the same time the safety deposit vault at the Bank of Montreal was robbed and the evidence Sir Clarence had brought home was stolen! Dr. David Alexander Stewart, present of the MHSS and former Superintendent of the TB sanitarium at Ninette had this to say, "Get out of my office. I don't have to speak to you." Chief Christopher Hugh Newton of the Assiniboia Police Department went on the record as saying, "How do you find this stuff out? Go away and mind your own business!" This is my business though. There are intelligent hat wearing dinosaurs hiding among us and they will kill and eat people to hide their secrets! One more piece of mystery though. Young Hattie Goldberg maid at the Royal Alexandra Hotel where the late Sir Clarence lived swears on a stack of, well not Bibles but Torahs that she saw Sir Clarence early Sunday morning when he was supposed to be lying dead in his bed? What about that?
