Fabulous Fetus Foils Fiendish Felons

Assiniboia, Manitoba November 15, 1932 by A. Nonymous

Yesterday saw some righteous Wondrous action as the Fetus, a Wonder we have long suspected to be an agent of BoHWI dealt with some would be yeggmen (and one yeggwoman). The scene, the Bank of Montreal at the corner of Queen and Victoria. Some dastardly, villainous Wonders disguised as God-fearing circus folk had infiltrated the bank overnight setting up a trapeze in the main hall. After a brief aerial display which 15 year old David McMaster characterized as "spellbinding" the yeggs robbed the vault and the poor bank customers alike! Mrs. Throckmorton, who is familiar to our readers was on the scene and described it as follows:

"These dirty wonders were trying to steal the working folk's hard earned money by distracting us from what they was up to! Some guy fell asleep right in the middle of the robbery! When one of the thugs checked his pockets they found papers identifying him as a sneaky agent of BoHWI! This set the fox in among the chickens and they started clucking and makin' motions to getting the hell out of there, if you'll pardon my French." When asked for a description of this literal sleeper agent Mrs. Throckmorton said he was "tall with a hat." Her account continues...

"Well, all the dirty yeggmen had left the bank hall and something was going on outside when this glowing thing floats into the bank. It looked like something you'd find in a certain alley, if you know what I mean. But it wuz alive! And it floated through the hall like it owed the place and went out back! And that's when the tall guy with the hat tried to lay its eggs in me! I know when to leave dammit and I needed to change me unmentionables as it was so I got out of there!"

The shackles media of the government and the police have not released much in the way of details but we do know that several corpses, no doubt bad uns slain by the Fetus were found in the back alley. When will the government stop hiding the truth from us? The people deserve to know the truth!

Wondrous Intervention on that Darkest Day?

On that infamous day known as Bloody Saturday, June 21, 1919 the photo to the right was taken by LB Foote. Mr. Foote's photo captured more than he intended. The white dot circled in red was captured on film. The rider of the lead horse confided in me that he had felt a whoosh go by. And why does the coroner's report, since classified as top secret, mention impact wounds on three of the casualties inconsistent with small arms fire? Someone is covering something up!
